ANGRY BIRDS™ Dream Blast

Systems & Economy Shift

A/B Test Proposal

ROVIO

The Problem

- A big portion of our resources comes from Dream World / Level ups, systems that do not introduce any urgency and are easy to miss
- Current economy relies on standard events as the main direct reward source, much higher than albums or BP, focusing on shorter term goals
- Battle Pass can be completed much faster than what was intended. This eliminates incentives for ongoing retention and can cause engagement drop-offs throughout the season
- Players have big wallets of resources, we need to adjust our economy flows to create a higher level of scarcity, at least compared to current engagement requirements
- We currently have very limited flexibility to adjust the economy without the change being immediately visible and attributable to one lever

The Core Idea

- Shift reward weight away from dream world and standard live events directly → toward albums
- Live events become an intermediary and obfuscation layer for the economy
- Obtain flexibility and control to adjust the economy without players tracing changes back to a single visible lever
- Move the album's balancing approach: from hard grind for a single completion → to first completion accessible to all, with the pinch on successive runs. Rewards scale accordingly
- Config-only change, no new systems required

Goals

- Push toward longer-term goals. Pressure players to stay invested across multiple events instead of finishing one and disengaging
- Increase Urgency. Relying on multiple events completion instead of passive level completion should increase the pressure on players and add a sense of urgency
- Systemic flexibility. Extra control over economy levers going forward
- Actual resource inflow reduction. Take advantage of the economy obfuscation to reduce the inflow and introduce a higher level of scarcity
- Stronger completion experience. Sets are currently too grindy to finish for most players. The new approach let players complete, feel rewarded, then face the next pinch: completion first, difficulty after
- Leverage badges. Our new social bragging feature is earned only through album completions, the aim is to reinforce this existing incentive

Systems Architecture

What Changed:

- Battle Pass Tokens granted from Events as well
- Dream world only has power-ups, events focus on boosters
- L packs only to event winners / TOF
- Envelopes in Dream World

Why:

- Increase focus on retention
- Increase value of systems with monetization potential

Flow Details

What Changed:

- Albums/sets become the main reward distributors
- Key resources reduced from regular events, which shift to an intermediary role
- Dream World becomes a secondary source
- TOF focuses on quality vs quantity

Why:

- Extra focus on retention systems
- More urgency built across the season

Why Is it Good for Players?

- Accessible album completions with gradual difficulty increase, that deliver frequent, high-impact reward moments instead of an unreachable grind
- Intentional, claimable milestones replace passive automatic payouts, providing clear visual progress and a genuine sense of accomplishment
- Unified progression: every live event directly feeds into long-term Album and Battle Pass goals, so no gameplay session feels wasted

Why is it good for us?

- Lower focus on passive systems like Dream World and Avatar Level should increase the level of urgency, driving extra purchases and engagement
- Shifting reward weight to albums and events becoming a key BP tokens source will increase multi-event engagement, improving the overall retention throughout the season
- More targeted economy scarcity should improve our monetization impact
- Accessible first completion + scaled pinch on repeats will reduce early demoralization/churn within the album/set experience, compared to the current hard-grind approach
- Leveraging badges through album completions will reinforce the social bragging loop, increasing motivation to pursue multiple completions

Target KPIs:

- Seasonal Retention
- Daily Engagement
- Reconversion
- Album engagement

Why Now?

- It would be better to test a new approach on the events and album structure before players get too used on the initial album setup
- This is a systemic shift, not a tuning pass. Needs focus time, not a last-minute call
- Requires Test 1 (Albums + Tower of Fortune) to be live and completed first, this is the dependency that makes early greenlight necessary
- Pitching now so the groundwork can start while Test 1 runs and we can be ready to go as soon as that's completed
